So big updates and new versions of these applications are always very important for our users. In many cases, the source code for some other applications that are not part of the "Siedler Library" may be an interface to it. Here are some examples. This is a plain text file that describes the interface to Siedler, for example: It is quite possible to use any style file here, saving it in the 1st or 2nd directory. But this is a rough fit, because sometimes it becomes necessary to change the styles in a different way. In this case, you can use commands such as `sedcl`, `sedmod`, `sodretex`, `odexserver`, `docsserver` or others programs. You may not use these commands except for `sed` command, which, like `sedcl`, is a standard program with many useful functions. The `sedwebserver.exe` program (given in Listing 2-1) will replace the base (or default) `sed.sed` file with a similar one but with a different extension, `sed-l.shtml`. In order for the program to work, you need to install some package called SEDLER (Siedler EnvGID). This program was created by the `sedplot` team, and its inclusion with Sieder provides a number of benefits. For example, you can make charts with the ability to dynamically edit content. In this case, the following functions will work with Seder: - `l_main` function (main - main) - controls the change in the main axis. The l-axis displays the number of columns in the chart. â€“ `l_bend` function - changing the lines of
