Here is a GM with a very dubious look on it, so I'm calling it completely clean-sheet design, because as far as I know, Bethesda has never taken on something like this before.. If you're a diehard superhero fan, there's a good chance you've watched every feature film, animated superhero cartoon, and even a few episodes of The CW's "The Flash." But do you know what the superhero character who's been portraying the iconic Flash on television since The CW's inception actually looks like? The Flash's Craig Watson is portrayed by the wonderfully eccentric Neil Sandilands, a character actor with a career spanning five decades. Who is Neil Sandilands, you ask? Well, he's a British movie and television actor, best known for portraying villain Mr. Aries in the 1988 David Cronenberg film "A History of Violence" and for his recurring role as the head of the TSA at McCarran International Airport in the popular TV series "Scrubs." Sandilands started off his career in the 1970s with roles in gritty British gangster dramas, such as "Scum" and "Mad Dogs and Englishmen." He later moved to the U.S. with his British wife, and he's been acting ever since. He became a household name in the 1980s for playing villains, often with dark and foreboding looks and grating gestures. Fans of the 1980s Sci-Fi Channel original, "Power" (pictured) may remember Sandilands for playing the sidekick to character John Collin.

Hello, there. I may be temporarily silent on the forums. I play a Maelstrom Double AQ fleet cloak in AE and plan to start participating in the LTI FoFA Fuel cans. You don't see this one around too much so be sure to mark it down so you know where to come and get it. Also, if you use Zone Chat (ZC) it has some stats that you should have, a screenshot of them would be nice. Hey, I am looking for a high yield ship right now; but I need a specific type. I am considering (but not really considering) selecting AK126 Aellarion. Its hull is in good shape, and it has good stats. However I am afraid it is Red Recovering and I cant use it. What are the chances of it getting reduced bounty by myself to a low one? Is it worth risking?
